

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN -FemLINK Pacific

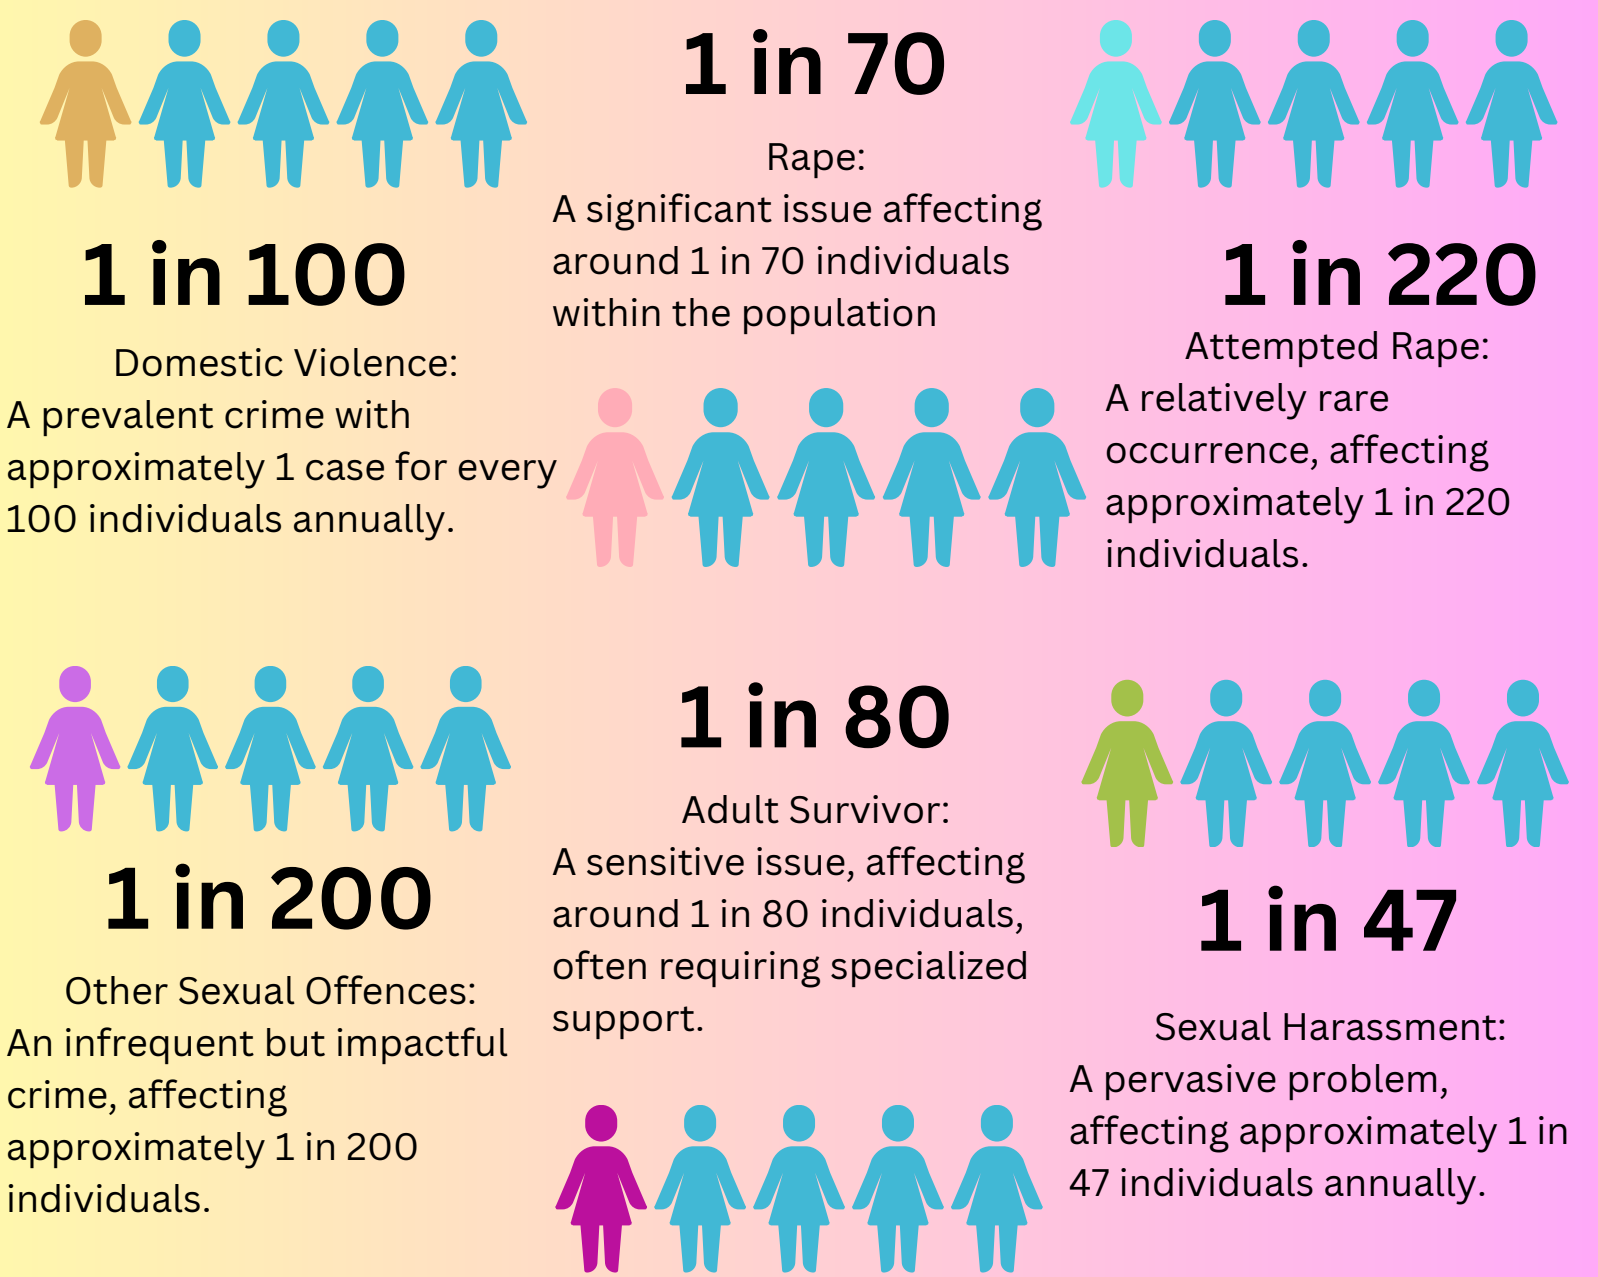

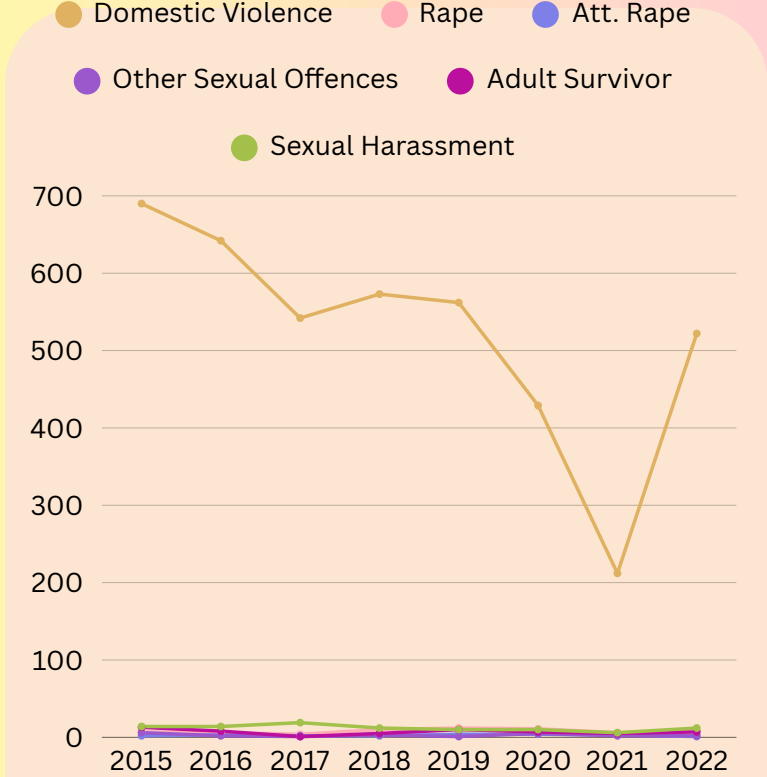

In Fiji, violence against women spans social boundaries, encompassing emotional, sexual, and physical assault. Cultural norms and systemic barriers perpetuate silence, hindering survivors' access to justice and support despite legislative efforts. Together, we strive to dismantle these barriers, fostering a future where Fijian women live free from fear and violence.

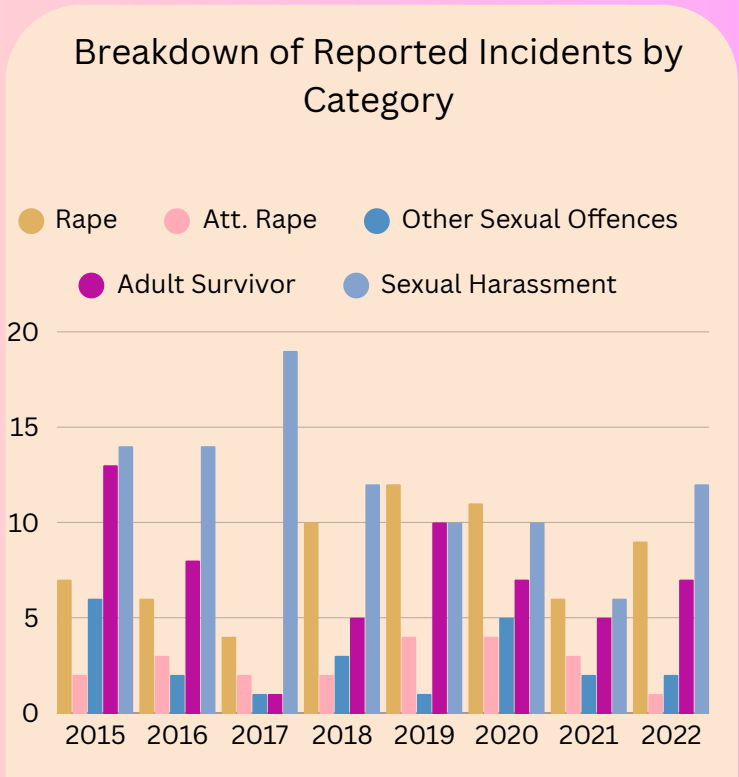

In Fiji, various types of violence against women are reported, including domestic violence, sexual assault, rape, emotional abuse, physical violence, harassment. These forms of violence can occur within intimate partner relationships, families, communities, workplaces, and institutions. Each type of violence presents unique challenges and impacts on survivors' physical, emotional, and psychological well-being, highlighting the complex nature of the issue

Vision for Change:" Femlink's Commitment to Gender Justice and Equality in the Pacific Region"

Vision – Femlink will be a local, national and regional catalyst for change through the use of accessible media and information, communication and technology as we seek a Pacific Region where there is gender justice, ecological sustainability, peace, freedom, equality and human rights.

Achieving the vision outlined by Femlink involves several strategies and actions:

Policy advocacy:

strategically influences decision-makers to enact or change policies, utilizing research, lobbying, and public campaigns to drive legislative reforms and address pressing issues effectively.

Capacity Building

This may involve providing skills training, leadership development, and education on legal rights and resources available for survivors of violence.

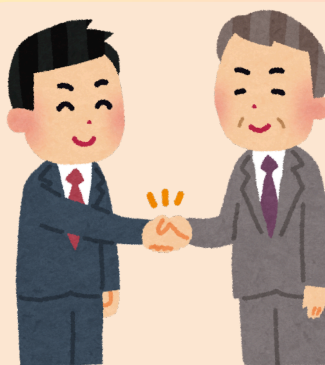

Advocate and raise awareness

Promote gender justice, ecological sustainability, and human rights through campaigns and community outreach in the Pacific.

Community building

entails fostering inclusive dialogue and collaboration among diverse members through events and initiatives, promoting solidarity and collective action towards shared goals, thereby enhancing social cohesion and resilience.

Build partnerships

Collaborate with stakeholders to leverage resources and coordinate efforts against violence and for gender justice.

Engage communities

Provide support services and grassroots initiatives to address the unique needs of women and girls.

"Femlink's tireless efforts pave the path towards a more inclusive and just Pacific

Region, where empowerment and collaboration herald a future of dignity and equality for all."
